

Achieve Your Tribal Opioid Response Goals

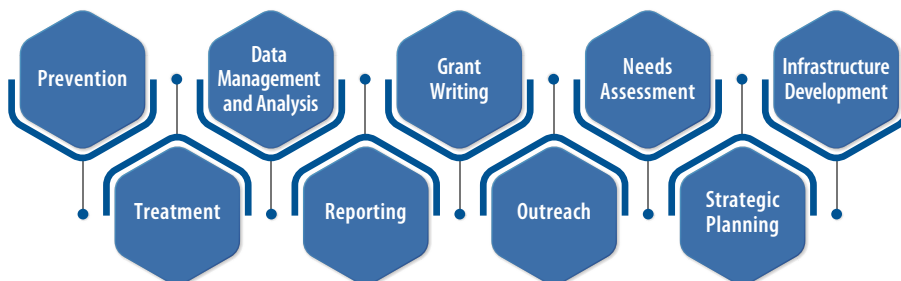

As a recipient of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA)'s Tribal Opioid Response (TOR) funds, you're probably determining your tribe's most pressing opioid issues and how the TOR funds can be used to benefit the most people. Also, as a condition of the funding, SAMHSA requires that you conduct a needs and capacity assessment to identify gaps and resources. As a grantee, you also must (1) create a strategic plan to describe how you will expand access to—and engagement in—treatment and recovery support services and (2) advance substance misuse prevention in coordination with other federally supported efforts. You are required to describe how you will improve retention in care using a chronic care model or another innovative model that has been shown to improve retention in care.

These requirements as well as many others related to infrastructure development are all areas in which RTI International can help your tribe to use evidence-based approaches and be able to demonstrate progress toward increasing treatment and reducing overdoses. With these funds, the potential to make a difference in the lives of those affected by the opioid crisis is great. We can help.

We have been working with SAMHSA and tribes for more than 50 years, and we understand the challenges you are facing in responding rapidly—and accountably—to the opioid epidemic. You, your staff, and your communities can leverage our experts and experience so your funding can have the highest impact for your tribe. Please contact us to discuss your priorities and needs, and how we can help your members while meeting all of SAMHSA's requirements.

Needs that RTI can address

Our experts provide proven solutions to challenges in each of these areas. We provide services to dozens of clients nationwide who are working hard to meet their day-to-day goals while meeting the demands of federal funding agencies.
